

Privacy Policy

The Contemporary School of Business

Last updated: 4 September 2026

1. Who we are

The Contemporary School of Business is a trading name of That Strategy Co Ltd ("we", "us", "our").

That Strategy Co Ltd is the organisation responsible for deciding how and why your personal information is processed and is therefore the "data controller" for the purposes of applicable UK data protection legislation.

Company registration number: 09316866

Registered office: 128 City Road, London, United Kingdom, EC1V 2NX

Privacy contact: hello@thecontemporaryschoolofbusiness.com

When we refer to "The Contemporary School of Business", "we", "us" or "our" in this Privacy Policy, we mean That Strategy Co Ltd trading as The Contemporary School of Business.

This Privacy Policy explains how we collect, use, store and protect personal information when you:

- visit or use our website
- enquire about our products or services
- purchase or access one of our programmes, courses, memberships, events or other services
- attend an event or training session
- communicate with us
- subscribe to our email communications
- interact with us through social media
- represent a business or organisation that purchases or enquires about our services
- otherwise provide personal information to us

We are committed to handling personal information responsibly, transparently and in accordance with applicable data protection law.

2. The data protection laws that apply

We process personal information in accordance with applicable data protection legislation, including the UK General Data Protection Regulation (UK GDPR), the Data Protection Act 2018, the Privacy and Electronic Communications Regulations 2003 (PECR) and any legislation that amends, replaces or supplements them.

3. What personal information do we collect?

The information we collect depends on how you interact with us.

This may include:

Information you provide directly

For example:

- your name
- email address
- telephone number
- postal address
- billing address
- company or organisation name
- job title or role
- payment and transaction information
- information contained in enquiries or correspondence
- information provided when completing applications or questionnaires
- information provided when registering for a programme, course, event or membership
- information provided when participating in surveys or providing feedback
- photographs, video or audio recordings where applicable
- information you provide during coaching, mentoring, training or other services and
- any other information you choose to provide to us

Information collected automatically

When you use our website or online services, we may collect information such as:

- IP address
- browser type and version
- device type
- operating system
- approximate location
- pages visited
- links clicked
- referring website
- time and date of visits
- information about how you interact with our website
- information collected through cookies and similar technologies

Information received from other sources

We may receive personal information from other sources where this is lawful and appropriate. These may include business partners, referral partners, companies or organisations you work for, service providers, advertising or marketing platforms, publicly available sources, professional advisers or other individuals who have a legitimate reason to provide your information to us.

4. How we use your personal information

We may use your personal information for purposes including:

Providing our products and services

We may use your information to:

- process enquiries and applications
- process purchases and payments
- provide access to programmes and other services
- administer events and training
- communicate with you about services you have purchased
- provide customer support

- manage your account
- provide coaching, mentoring or training
- monitor and improve the quality of our services
- administer our contractual relationships

Business administration

We may use personal information to:

- maintain our business records
- manage accounts and payments
- maintain financial and accounting records
- obtain professional advice
- protect our business and legal rights
- deal with complaints and disputes
- establish, exercise or defend legal claims
- comply with legal and regulatory obligations
- prevent fraud, misuse or other unlawful activity

Marketing

We may use personal information to provide information about our products, services, programmes, events, offers and other activities where we are legally permitted to do so.

Depending on the circumstances, we may rely on consent, legitimate interests or another lawful basis for marketing.

Where applicable, we will comply with the requirements of PECR when sending electronic marketing communications.

You can unsubscribe from marketing communications at any time by using the unsubscribe link in the relevant communication or by contacting us.

Your right to object to direct marketing is absolute.

Improving our business

We may use information to:

- understand how customers and visitors use our services
- analyse the effectiveness of our marketing

- improve our website and online services
- develop new products and services
- understand customer preferences
- measure attendance and engagement
- conduct surveys and research
- improve customer experience

Where appropriate, we may use aggregated or anonymised information for these purposes.

5. Our lawful bases for processing

We will only process personal information where we have a lawful basis to do so.

Depending on the circumstances, these may include:

Contract

We may process your information where this is necessary to enter into or perform a contract with you.

For example, if you purchase a programme from us, we need to process your information to take payment, provide access to the programme and communicate with you about the service.

Legal obligation

We may process your information where this is necessary to comply with a legal or regulatory obligation, such as maintaining financial records or responding to lawful requests from authorities.

Legitimate interests

We may process personal information where this is necessary for our legitimate interests, provided those interests are not overridden by your rights and freedoms.

Our legitimate interests may include:

- operating and managing our business
- providing and improving our services
- managing business relationships
- communicating with existing customers

- preventing fraud and misuse
- protecting our legal rights
- managing disputes
- understanding how our services are used
- developing and improving products and services
- conducting appropriate direct marketing where permitted by law

Where we rely on legitimate interests, we will consider whether the processing is necessary and balance our interests against your rights and freedoms.

Consent

In some circumstances, we may rely on your consent.

Where we rely on consent, you have the right to withdraw it at any time.

Withdrawing consent does not affect the lawfulness of processing carried out before you withdrew your consent.

6. Marketing

We may use personal information for direct marketing where permitted by applicable law.

Marketing may include:

- email
- telephone
- text message
- post
- online advertising
- social media advertising
- invitations to events
- information about courses, programmes, memberships and services

Where required by law, we will obtain your consent before sending electronic marketing communications.

In some circumstances, we may rely on legitimate interests or the "soft opt-in" where the relevant legal requirements are satisfied.

For B2B marketing, the rules can differ depending on whether we are contacting a corporate subscriber or an individual such as a sole trader. UK GDPR continues to apply where personal data is involved.

We will always provide an appropriate means of opting out of direct marketing.

You can unsubscribe from our marketing at any time.

We do not sell your personal information to third parties for their own direct marketing purposes.

7. Business-to-business customers and contacts

Our services may be purchased by companies, organisations and other businesses.

If you contact us or purchase services on behalf of a business, we may process information about you in your professional capacity, such as:

- your name
- work email address
- work telephone number
- job title
- employer or organisation
- information about your business relationship with us
- correspondence and transaction information

The fact that information is provided in a business context does not necessarily mean that data protection law does not apply. Where information identifies or relates to an individual, it may constitute personal data.

If an organisation purchases a service from us, we may also process information about individuals who are authorised to administer or use that service.

8. Payments

When you purchase products or services from us, payments may be processed by third-party payment providers.

We may receive information such as:

- your name
- billing information
- transaction details
- payment status
- payment reference
- limited payment information necessary to administer the transaction

We do not generally store complete payment card details ourselves where payment is processed directly by a third-party payment provider.

Payment providers process information in accordance with their own privacy policies and applicable legal requirements.

9. Sharing your personal information

We may share your personal information where this is necessary, lawful and appropriate for the purposes described in this Privacy Policy.

We may share information with trusted third-party service providers and professional advisers who help us operate our business and provide our products and services.

These may include providers of:

- payment processing
- customer relationship management
- email and marketing services
- course and learning platforms
- website hosting and technology
- IT and software services
- analytics
- advertising and marketing
- video conferencing
- event management
- accounting and financial services
- legal and professional advice

- other business support services

The specific third-party providers we use may change from time to time as our business and technology requirements develop.

Some third parties will process personal information on our behalf as service providers or data processors. Others may process information independently in accordance with their own privacy policies where they have their own legal responsibilities for that information.

We may also share personal information:

- where required by law
- with regulators, government authorities or law enforcement agencies where legally required or permitted
- with courts or other parties where necessary to establish, exercise or defend legal rights
- where necessary to prevent fraud or protect our business, customers or others
- in connection with a potential or actual sale, restructuring, merger or transfer of all or part of our business

We do not sell your personal information.

10. International transfers

Some of the third-party service providers we use may process personal information outside the United Kingdom.

Where personal information is transferred outside the UK, we will take appropriate steps to ensure that the transfer is lawful and that appropriate safeguards are in place where required.

This may include:

- transferring information to a country recognised as providing an adequate level of protection
- using appropriate contractual safeguards
- relying on another lawful transfer mechanism
- obtaining your consent where this is legally appropriate

If you require further information about international transfers involving your personal information, please contact us.

11. How long do we keep your personal information?

We will not keep personal information for longer than is reasonably necessary for the purposes for which it was collected.

The length of time we retain information will depend on factors including:

- the purpose for which the information was collected
- whether you have an ongoing relationship with us
- whether we have legal or regulatory obligations to retain it
- whether we need the information to establish, exercise or defend legal claims
- accounting and tax requirements
- the nature of the information
- our legitimate business requirements

Different categories of information may therefore be retained for different periods.

When personal information is no longer required, we will securely delete it, anonymise it or otherwise dispose of it appropriately.

12. Your data protection rights

Subject to certain legal conditions and exemptions, you may have the right to:

- Access the personal information we hold about you
- Correction of inaccurate or incomplete personal information
- Erasure of your personal information in certain circumstances
- Restriction of processing in certain circumstances
- Object to certain processing activities, including direct marketing
- Data portability in certain circumstances
- Withdraw consent where we rely on consent as our lawful basis

You have an absolute right to object to the processing of your personal information for direct marketing purposes.

These rights are not absolute and may not apply in every situation.

13. How to exercise your rights

If you wish to exercise any of your rights, please contact:

Email: hello@thecontemporaryschoolofbusiness.com

Please provide sufficient information to allow us to identify you and understand your request.

We may need to verify your identity before responding to certain requests.

We will normally respond to a valid request within the period required by applicable data protection law.

We will not normally charge a fee for exercising your data protection rights, although applicable law permits us to charge a reasonable fee in certain circumstances, or refuse a request that is manifestly unfounded or excessive.

14. Cookies and similar technologies

Our website may use cookies and similar technologies.

Cookies may be used for purposes including:

- enabling essential website functionality
- remembering preferences
- understanding how visitors use our website
- measuring website performance
- improving our services
- supporting security
- analysing marketing campaigns
- delivering or measuring online advertising

Some cookies are essential for the website to function. Other cookies may require your consent.

Where required, we will ask for your consent before placing or accessing non-essential cookies or similar technologies.

You can manage your cookie preferences through our cookie settings mechanism.

For more information, please see our Cookie Policy.

15. Analytics and advertising

We may use analytics and advertising technologies to understand how visitors use our website and to measure or improve our marketing.

Depending on the technologies we use, these may involve information being shared with third-party providers.

Where required by law, we will obtain consent before using non-essential tracking technologies.

We may also use aggregated or anonymised information to understand website usage and marketing performance.

16. Social media

We may operate social media accounts and our website may contain links to or integrations with social media platforms.

If you interact with us through social media, the relevant social media provider may process your personal information in accordance with its own privacy policy.

We do not control how third-party social media platforms process your information.

17. Online meetings, events, coaching and training

If you participate in an online meeting, course, coaching session, training session or event, we may process information such as:

- your name
- contact details
- attendance information
- questions or contributions
- chat messages
- feedback
- photographs
- video
- audio
- information relating to your participation

Where sessions are recorded, we will provide appropriate notice where required.

If you attend an event where photography or filming is taking place, we may use recordings or images for legitimate business, promotional or archival purposes where legally permitted. Where consent is required, we will obtain it.

18. Testimonials and case studies

We may ask customers to provide testimonials, reviews or feedback about our services.

Where we intend to use a testimonial, photograph, video, case study or other material that identifies you for promotional purposes, we will obtain your permission where required by law.

You can contact us if you wish to withdraw permission for future use, although this will not necessarily require us to remove material that has already been lawfully published.

19. Special category personal information

We generally do not need to collect special category personal information in order to provide our services.

Special category information includes information such as health information, racial or ethnic origin, religious beliefs, political opinions, biometric information and information concerning sex life or sexual orientation.

If you choose to provide special category information to us, for example in connection with accessibility requirements, we will only process it where we have a lawful basis and, where required, an additional condition under applicable data protection law.

You should avoid providing sensitive personal information to us unless it is genuinely necessary for the service or purpose concerned.

20. Information about children

Our services are generally intended for adults and businesses.

We do not knowingly collect personal information from children for the purpose of selling adult-focused products or services.

If a particular programme or service is intended to be available to individuals under 18, we will provide appropriate additional information and safeguards where required.

If you believe that a child has provided personal information to us in circumstances where it should not have been collected, please contact us.

21. Security

We take reasonable and appropriate technical and organisational measures to protect personal information against:

- unauthorised access
- accidental loss
- destruction
- misuse
- alteration
- unlawful processing

However, no method of transmitting information over the internet or storing information electronically is completely secure.

We therefore cannot guarantee absolute security.

22. Automated decision-making and profiling

We may use technology to analyse information, segment audiences, personalise communications or understand how customers interact with our services.

We do not currently intend to make decisions based solely on automated processing, including profiling, that produce legal or similarly significant effects on individuals.

Where this changes, we will provide the information required by applicable data protection law.

23. Links to third-party websites

Our website and communications may contain links to websites, platforms or services operated by third parties.

This Privacy Policy does not apply to those third-party websites.

We are not responsible for the privacy practices, security or content of third-party websites.

We recommend that you read the privacy policy of any third-party website you visit.

24. Complaints

If you have any concern about how we have handled your personal information, please contact us first:

Email: hello@thecontemporaryschoolofbusiness.com

You also have the right to complain to the UK's data protection regulator, the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO).

Information about making a complaint is available from the ICO's website.

We would, however, appreciate the opportunity to address your concerns before you approach the ICO.

25. Changes to this Privacy Policy

We may update this Privacy Policy from time to time to reflect:

- changes to our business
- changes to the services we provide
- changes to the technology we use
- changes to the way we process personal information
- changes to applicable laws or regulatory requirements
- changes to guidance from relevant regulators

The latest version will be published on our website.

We recommend that you review this Privacy Policy periodically.

26. Contact us

If you have any questions about this Privacy Policy or how we process personal information, please contact us.

That Strategy Co Ltd trading as The Contemporary School of Business

Company number: 09316866

Registered office: 128 City Road, London, United Kingdom, EC1V 2NX

Email: hello@thecontemporaryschoolofbusiness.com

Website: www.thecontemporaryschoolofbusiness.com

<https://thefounderassessment.com/>

Last updated: 4 September 2026